When a government office in Asheville, NC needed a filing system for their tax and property maps, they turned to Ulrich, the leader in large document filing solutions.

The maps at this county office are used by general public, contractors and the government workers so the filing system needed to be easy to use. With so many potential users, the ergonomics were an important consideration as was the ability to access each individual map quickly. Space was limited and the customer hoped to find a system with the capacity to file all the maps in one room with space remaining for the large format copy machines and plotters. Flat files were considered, but they simply would not fit in the room. Also, flat files were deemed too difficult for the users because the individual maps would be stacked in drawers containing close to 100 maps per drawer. Putting a map back in the bottom of a drawer would be almost impossible. Plus flat files would have cost more! This county office chose the "Ulrich Pinfile" for the great benefits it affords.

- Ease of use and ergonomics with all filing done at a comfortable height.
- Great individual map access. Users only handle the map they want.
- Space saving vertical design and attractive, modern styling for the office.
- The highest quality construction with beautiful finish and durability.
